Special Issue on

Occupational and Organizational Psychology

Call for Papers

Occupational and Organizational Psychology is the science of human behavior relating to work and applies psychological theories and principles to organizations and individuals in their places of work as well as the individual's work-life more generally. The research contributes to an organization's success by improving the performance, motivation, job satisfaction, and occupational safety and health as well as the overall health and well-being of its employees.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Occupational and Organizational Psychology. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Occupational stress and job satisfaction
- Organizational culture
- Worker attitudes and behaviors
- Group behavior
- Performance appraisal
- Evaluation and psychometrics
- Training and development needs
- Personnel psychology
- Motivation and leadership
- Disability management
- Occupational safety
- Gender issues
- Human factors and organizational development

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the "Special Issue" under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field "Special Issue – *Occupational and Organizational Psychology" should be chosen during your submission.
