

Special Issue on Health Psychology and Health Promotion

Call for Papers

"Health Psychology and Health Promotion" is an academic field that explores the interplay between psychological factors and health outcomes. It encompasses studying how thoughts, behaviors, and emotions influence health, as well as developing strategies to promote healthy behaviors and prevent illness. Researchers in this field focus on topics such as stress, health behavior change, adherence to medical treatments, the impact of social and cultural factors on health, and the development of interventions to improve overall well-being and promote healthy lifestyles.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Health Psychology and Health Promotion. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Health behaviors and mental health
- Positive psychology and well-being
- Cognitive determinants of health behavior
- Behavioral and lifestyle medicine
- Promotion of cognitive health
- Mental disorders and psychotherapy
- Prevention and health behavior interventions
- Rehabilitation psychology
- Stress and coping
- Assessments and evaluations
- Health literacy and health behavior
- Health psychology and quality of life
- Chronic illness and self-management
- Psychology of disability
- Health psychology and aging
