

Special Issue on Couple & Family Psychology

Call for Papers

"Couple & Family Psychology" is an academic topic that focuses on understanding and enhancing the psychological health and relationships within couples and families. It explores the dynamics of interpersonal interactions, communication patterns, and conflict resolution within these systems. This field also investigates the impact of family structures, cultural backgrounds, and environmental factors on family relationships. Through research and intervention, Couple & Family Psychology aims to foster healthy, supportive, and resilient family environments.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Couple & Family Psychology. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Child and adolescent family psychology
- Parenting styles and practices
- Dynamics and interactions within family systems
- Conflict resolution
- Couples therapy and intervention
- Family therapy and intervention
- Family violence and abuse
- Cultural and cross-cultural family psychology
- Family resilience and coping
- Family environment on personality
- Emotional intelligence and attachment
- Intimate relationships
