4. Tracking Techniques and Technologies and Targeted Advertising

Tracking Techniques and Technologies

We and our third-party business partners use various tools and technologies such as cookies, pixels, localStorage, web beacons, software development kits, and similar technologies (collectively, “Tracking Technologies”) to collect data when you interact with our Products and Services, including our websites, mobile applications, and email communications. Some of these technologies store data in the browser or on your device. Other technologies may use network-related or other information to recognize your device (e.g., IP address).

Our Products and Services use Tracking Technologies, for example, when you first request a web page and data is then stored on your computer or other device so the website can access Personal Information when you make subsequent requests for pages from that Product or Service. These technologies may also be used to collect and store information about your usage of the Products and Services, such as pages you have visited, and Content you viewed or searched for. We may also use these technologies to save your preferences, consent, and choices; determine if you opened or interacted with our emails or newsletters; troubleshoot and resolve technical issues or outages; conduct research; deliver editorial Content and advertising; maintain subscription and registration information; and store information you may want to retrieve on a regular basis. Additionally, we may use these technologies to collect analytics and measure the use of our Products and Services.

The use of these Tracking Technologies helps us serve you better by understanding what you are interested in, track trends, measure the effectiveness of ads, conduct frequency capping, and tailor offers about our Products and Services to you. We also allow specific, approved third-party business partners and/or service providers, including Google Analytics, to collect data from your browser or device for Targeted Advertising, analytics, and measurement purposes using their own similar tools. For more information about Google Analytics including how to opt out, visit How Google Uses Information and to Opt-out of Google Analytics.

We and our third-party business partners may also use these Tracking Technologies to gather Personal Information, including Sensitive Personal Information, about how you view and use our Products and Services and to connect your activity with other data we maintain about you.

Targeted Advertising and Identity Resolution Partners

We and our third-party business partners may collect and share Personal Information about your online and offline activities over time and across unaffiliated websites and mobile applications to predict your preferences and interests, and, in conjunction with third parties, may use your Personal Information for cross-context behavioral advertising and to serve advertising believed to be of interest to you ("Targeted Advertising").

We may collaborate with our service providers and our third-party Identity Resolution Partners to deliver Targeted Advertising and identify the different devices and browsers you may use to access our Products and Services. We and these Identity Resolution Partners facilitate identity resolution by creating probabilistic and deterministic identifiers. These identifiers may use Personal Information, including your name, email address, phone number, and Activity and Device Information to generate an online identifier reasonably linkable to you and/or your device or browser.

For example, we may disclose hashed email address, phone number, or other information about your device to our Identity Resolution Partners, who may, in turn, return an online identifier that we may store in a first party cookie or similar technology and disclose to our advertising partners to provide you a more personalized advertising experience. These identifiers also help us with fraud detection and security, to enforce our User Agreement, verify user authentication for accessing Content behind a paywall, and to determine eligibility for offers available exclusively to new subscribers, among other things. We are not responsible for the privacy practices of our Identity Resolution Partners, which are separate from our own and which are not covered by this Privacy Policy. You can Opt-Out of Identity Resolution Partner LiveRamp's use of your Personal Information for these purposes by visiting https://optout.liveramp.com/opt\_out, or, as described in the Opting Out of a "Sale" or "Sharing" of Your Personal Information or of its Use for Targeted Advertising section below.

As noted in the Social Media Company Integration section above, we may utilize Tracking Technologies to disclose information about your use of our Products and Services to social media companies and other third-party business partners to serve you and other segments of users Targeted Advertising and to facilitate marketing communications.

We and our advertising partners may make inferences about your interests and these inferences may be used for Targeted Advertising. In certain U.S. states, these inferences may be considered Sensitive Personal Information. When we obtain this information from our third-party business partners, we will, where required by law, contractually ensure that they have obtained your consent or offered you an opportunity to opt out before sharing it with us. Similarly, if we collect Sensitive Personal Information directly from you, where required by law, we will obtain your consent, provide you an opportunity to opt out, or take other appropriate action. For more information about your rights regarding Sensitive Personal Information under local laws, please refer to the Exercising Your Privacy Rights, Including the Right to Opt Out of Targeted Advertising section below.

5. Opting Out of Third-Party Tracking Technologies

As noted above, when you use our Products and Services, our third-party advertising partners, social media companies, and analytics providers may collect Personal Information about your online activity on our Products and Services and on third-party websites. These providers may use Tracking Technologies to deliver advertisements to you when you visit third-party websites within their networks.

There are a variety of methods available to you to opt out of certain third-party Tracking Technologies, including using tools provided within your device, browser, or the settings menu within a mobile application which may include an option that allows you to refuse the placement of certain Tracking Technologies.

If you would like more information about this practice and your choices with respect to it, please visit YourAdChoices.com, NAI Opt Out of Interest-Based Advertising, or Your Online Choices, and/or click the “Ad Choices” icon that appears in Targeted Advertising on our websites. Please note that when following the processes described below, you may need to make your Opt-Out choices on each website, mobile application, browser, and device that you use, and if your browser’s cookies are cleared, you may need to repeat the process. However, if you have created an account to log in across several of our apps and/or websites, we will make reasonable efforts to apply your opt-out request to each of those apps and websites.

- To exercise your right to opt-out of our “sale” or “sharing” of your Personal Information, the use of your Personal Information for Targeted Advertising purposes, or to limit our use and disclosure of your Sensitive Personal Information (collectively "Opt-Out") on our websites and mobile applications, where such choices are available to you under applicable local law:
  - Click on the “Your Privacy Choices” button/link, typically located in the footer of our brand (such as The New Yorker, Vogue, or Wired) website or in the settings/about menu of our brands’ mobile applications. Please then follow the instructions on the applicable “Your Privacy Choices” webpage, which may request that you slide a toggle switch or submit a form to effectuate your choice.
  - As noted above, your choices are specific to the browser, website, mobile application, and device you are using. Although we will make reasonable efforts to apply your opt-out request across several of our apps and/or websites if you have created an account to log in across several of our apps and/or websites, this generally means that:
    - If you accessed the “Your Privacy Choices” button/link from the website or mobile application of a Condé Nast brand, such as The New Yorker, Vogue, or Wired, when you make your Opt-Out choice following the process described above, the Opt-Out will only be applied on the specific brand’s website. - We also recognize Global Privacy Control as valid opt-out method. Certain browsers and browser extensions support Global Privacy Control which sends a signal to websites indicating your choice to Opt-out of the use of your Personal Information for Targeted Advertising and “sales” or “shares” as defined under applicable law. We honor the GPC and where required by law, similar user-initiated browser based opt-out preference signals. Note that the Global Privacy Control is currently only applicable to opt-outs from websites. For mobile apps, please follow the instructions above.

- Google uses Tracking Technologies and Activity and Device Information in combination with information they maintain to show you Targeted Advertising on our websites and mobile apps. For more information about this including how to opt-out of the use of certain of these Tracking Technologies, please visit the Google Advertising Privacy Terms.
- Do Not Track (DNT). Your browser setting may allow you to automatically transmit a "Do Not Track" (DNT) signal to websites and online services that you visit. Since there is no consensus about what DNT means in this context and how to implement DNT signals, like many other businesses, our websites do not respond to these DNT signals, but you have the options noted above and below to make choices about how your Personal Information is used.
