Earth System Science Data indexed in Scopus

Scopus has completed its evaluation of Earth System Science Data (ESSD) and announced that it will include the journal in the database. This is thrilling news and represents the immense amount of work by the editorial board and, more importantly, the confidence of the scientific community in ESSD through the submission of their high quality articles.

Please note that it may take several weeks or even months until Scopus has processed all XML metadata following the data transfer from Copernicus Publications.
