

Modern Slavery Statement 2023/2024

Slavery and Human Trafficking Statement

About us

The Forestry Commission provides the government's expertise on forestry and is a Non Ministerial Department. We are tackling some of society's biggest challenges through thriving trees, woods and forests and we increase the value of woodlands to society and the environment. We have two agencies: Forestry England and Forest Research.

Forestry England is England's largest land manager, largest outdoor recreation provider and custodian of the nation's public forests. Forestry England has around 1,200 committed staff and volunteers looking after more land and more trees than any other organisation. It generates revenue by sustainably harvesting and selling timber, and by working with commercial partners to offer new ways to experience and enjoy woodlands and develop business activities.

Forest Research is Great Britain's principal organisation for forestry and tree related research and is internationally renowned for the provision of evidence and scientific services in support of sustainable forestry.

Our supply chains

Our supply chains are made up of a diverse range of third-party providers, many of which are small and medium sized enterprises (SMEs). We procure a varied range of goods, from corporate clothing and tree shelters, through to services such as harvesting timber, planting trees, forest road maintenance, plant health surveillance and recreation provision. We also award grants to others to protect, improve, expand and connect England's woodlands. In 2023/24 our spend with suppliers was approximately £131 million.

We have a zero-tolerance approach to slavery and human trafficking and are committed to ensuring that there is no modern slavery or human trafficking in our supply chains or in any part of our business.

This statement explains the steps that we took during financial year 2023/24 to identify, prevent and mitigate modern slavery in our operations and supply chains. We publish this statement on our gov.uk website, and the modern slavery statement registry.

Steps to tackle modern slavery

We have taken the following steps to reduce the risk of modern slavery in our business:

Recruitment & employee relations

We pay all our employees at or above the National Living Wage. We have grievance, safeguarding, bullying and harassment, and whistleblowing policies that give a platform for our employees and volunteers to raise concerns on any wrong-doing or poor working practices.

Forestry Commission Trade Unions (FCTU) is the joint trade union of the Forestry Commission. It is made up of representatives from each of the recognised unions and from all parts of the FC (Forestry England, Forest Services and Forest Research). There is a multi-tier reporting route for staff councils so everyone can get in touch with their union representatives.

Collaboration with other bodies

We are active members of the Defra modern slavery steering group. The group drives forward initiatives centered around the elimination of and reporting of modern slavery mitigations in our business operations and activities. In August 2023, we took part in a collective project to evaluate our current capability to address the risk of modern slavery, both at an organisational level, and in our supply chain. The outcomes and recommendations from this project will be developed into actions plans during 2024/25.

Selecting who we work with

We require our suppliers to follow the Government Supplier Code of Conduct and our grant recipients are expected to follow the Government Code of Conduct for Grant Recipients.

Our tenders follow the due diligence processes of the Public Contract Regulations 2015 and Concession Contract Regulations 2016. All major procurements explicitly evaluate social value, including the bidders' approach to tackling modern slavery risks where this is relevant. This is completed as part of our assessment of the most economically advantageous tender and accounts for at least 10% of scoring.

We also check the slavery and human trafficking statements of those bidding for our contracts.

Case Study

Forestry England's Delamere nursery in Cheshire hosts the largest glasshouse dedicated to growing forest trees in the UK. It uses seasonal labour to support this important operation.

Our labour provider is required to demonstrate they are taking actions to prevent and tackle modern slavery. One of the methods they use is a dedicated confidential telephone number for workers to report concerns of exploitation or human trafficking.

Risk Assessments

A risk assessment is completed during the procurement planning stage. This assessment looks at aspects such as industry type, supplier location and nature of the workforce, as well as recent market intelligence. Where a high level of risk is indicated, detailed supply chain information is required from suppliers as part of the selection stage.

Health and Safety

Many signs of modern slavery include health and safety violations such as injuries, fatigue, excessive working hours, and lack of access to personal protective equipment. Before using a supplier, we need to be satisfied that they will do the job safely and without risks to health. We use our Contractor Health and Safety Questionnaires to do this. These require evidence of good H&S practice such as policies, training and qualifications before work can start.

Contract terms

Our standard conditions of contract reflect our zero-tolerance approach to slavery and human trafficking. This includes requirements to conduct proper and detailed checks on any sub-contractors and to assist the Forestry Commission in identifying any non-compliance.

Training and awareness raising

All staff in Forest Services and Forestry England complete online training in safeguarding children and adults. More detailed training is completed by those staff and volunteers that work public facing roles which may have contact with children and or vulnerable individuals.

Our Commercial Services & Procurement teams undertake regular Continuing Professional Development which includes the annual Chartered Institute of Purchasing and Supply (CIPS) ethical procurement eLearning and assessment.
