The 2nd INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE of the JOURNAL SCUOLA DEMOCRATICA "REINVENTING EDUCATION" will be hosted online June 3 through 5 2021, by Scuola Democratica, Centro Interuniversitario per la Ricerca Didattica (University of Cagliari and University of Sassari), il Mulino. The challenges posed by the contemporary world have long required a rethinking of educational concepts, policies, and practices. The question about education 'for what' as well as 'how' and 'for whom' has become unavoidable and yet it largely remained elusive due to a tenacious attachment to the ideas and routines of the past which are now far off the radical transformations required of educational systems. Scenarios, reflections, and practices fostering the possibility of change towards the reinvention of the educational field as a driver of more general and global changes are centerstage topics at the Conference and will have a multidisciplinary approach from experts from different disciplinary communities, including sociology, pedagogy, psychology, economics, architecture, political science, etc. We hope with this opportunity to confirm the participation obtained at the first edition of the conference. Organizers, promoters and partners of the Conference wish to invite educators, teachers, researchers, scholars, academics, scientists, professionals, experts and policy makers to join the conversation and bring the disciplines towards a more integrated set of alliances by:

- promoting a trans and inter disciplinary discussion on urgent topics;
- fostering debates among experts and professionals;
- diffusing research findings all over international scientific networks and practitioners' mainstreams;
- launching further strategies and networking alliances on local, national and international scale;
- providing a new space for debate and evidence to educational policies.

We invite you to submit ABSTRACT/PAPER for your presentation at the Panel session:

E. 10 REINVENTING UNIVERSITY. PUBLIC ENGAGEMENT AS PARTICIPATIVE AND COLLECTIVE UNIVERSITY

Convenors

Fiorella Vinci (Università eCampus); Tiziana Tarsia (Università degli Studi di Messina); Vincenza Pellegrino (Università degli Studi di Parma)

Keywords

Participatory Teaching and Research; Third Mission; Tacit Knowledge; Emancipatory Teaching; Students Self-Organization

The pandemic emergency has been superimposed on crisis factors that have been questioning the university world in a new way for some time. On one hand, the possibility of producing and accrediting knowledge useful to the intelligibility of the processes underway is in question; on the other hand, the possibility of universities to participate in the morphogenetic processes of contemporary society is in question. The debate on the functions of universities in the processes of economic and social development seems to be reviving around new interpretative approaches.

Research on participatory approaches identifies universities as situated spaces of learning and explores paths of contamination between disciplines and with the vital worlds of those who inhabit the territories. In these specific models, both research and teaching and the third mission are adapted following 'emancipatory paradigms' (Massari & Pellegrino 2020): students become researching actors; social groups are part of the research booths. These models of university evolution are variously conceptualized as 'democratic' (Appadurai 2013), 'pluriversal' (Santos 2018), 'collective' (Pellegrino 2018), 'situated' (Pellegrino, Tarsia, Schirripa 2019) University. In fact, they are similar in their intent to work with participatory and collaborative methods and tools on the emergence of less visible knowledge embedded in social practices and conflicts. All of this, invites thinking about the interdependence and social embeddedness of the different missions of university work. One can think of the Third Mission as rooted in research and teaching and as intelligible and realizable starting from the professional and social relationships through which the job of researcher and of university teacher are co-determined. All these elements seem to delineate social relations that can be mediated in a way by technology, understood as a platform that can relate distant social groups, acquire a perspective of constantly multi-sited analysis of problems and pay attention to specific relational dynamics. Ways and contents can be reconnected and contribute to the acquisition of a critical and scientific habitus of a 'g-local' type, rather than an adaptive and reproductive one.

In these cases, university institutional engagement, understood as emancipating public action, attempts in various forms to relate social groups involved in the same problem but separated by 'lines' of spatial, social and relational segregation. Finally, the panel intends to explore the hypothesis of an evolution of the University in a participatory key, collecting contributions on practices of university work aimed at making intelligible the processes of change taking place, paying attention to the actors and the territories they inhabit.

Proposals are welcome on the following topics, with particular interest in exploring empirical cases:

- Activities of public engagement attentive to the protagonism of social groups not very visible in the public scene;

- Activation of participatory and collaborative methods linked to a meta-reflection on the knowledge that is being built and oriented to generate emancipation in students, professionals, organizations;
- Research and teaching practices centered on professional and non-professional tacit knowledge;
- Pathways between universities and organizations of the third sector and other institutions that have generated new knowledge and change;
- Structuring of processes of reflective and creative learning located outside the classroom, in neighborhoods and urban peripheries;
- Expressions of autonomous student collective subjectivities aimed at affecting the how and why of their university education.
- International experiences of self-reform of university didactics by teachers and students read in a comparative key.
